WOMEN AT THE RACES.

Society Ladies Not Addicted to Betting.
—A Strange Lot at Brighton Beach.
The society woman of New York is much maligned, but never more brutally than when represented as gambling with book-makers at the races. The stories of the "New York belles" queer capers seem to find ready credence out of town, however. A lady in New York does not differ materially from a lady in any other quarter of the globe. Ladies do not gamble here or elsewhere, unless one regards a playful wager of gloves with a personal friend as gambling.
The women who have the smallest—if any—pretensions to social recognition are to be found at Brighton Beach. This course has become famous for its "off" decisions and "fixed" races. It is on Coney Island, and it catches the rag-tag and riff-raff of the famous beach, as well as a daily contingent of 2,000 or 3,000 "sports" from New York and Brooklyn. Pool tickets may be bought for so small a sum as $2.00, and the crowd is composed of extraordinarily heterogeneous elements. Negro stablemen, Irish saloonkeepers, French barbers, German tailors, Scandinavian boarding-house runners, toughs, plugs, brokers, spruce young clerks, policemen off for a day, crooks of every variety from sneak thieves to expert bank cracksmen, casual bootmen, waiters, hackmen, bootblacks, English visitors, who are as likely as not to be men of title, diminutive jockeys, farmers and flashy sports, all allowing their way in and out, smoking cheap cigars, drinking quantities of beer and betting all they are worth on every race. As may well be imagined the women who accompany these men are not socially lovable. They are a strange lot. The number who attend the races day after day the season through at Brighton Beach is perhaps a little less than 100, but the occasional visitors are in the contingent to perhaps 300 women—there are several thousand men. Some of these are hard-featured, coarse and repulsive creatures, dressed in gorgeous red or blue satin gowns with their slim fingers looped with sho. rings and their hair bleached to a sickening shade of yellow. They bet rather heavily, entrusting their money to more or less broken and dissipated women who attend the races in a shame-faced way. One occasionally sees some big, good-natured and cheaply dressed woman betting at intervals through a shrewd-looking lad or an old-time assessor. She probably the mother and her attendant the brother or father of one of the jockeys.
—New York Cor. Pioneer Press.

A Bluff That Was Called.
I have an acquaintance in New York who enjoys life by practicing bluff. He is forever doing what he should not do, saying what he should not say and going where he has no moral or legal right to go, just to see if he can manage to carry himself through by aid of his wiles and guile. One day he went on a little trip into the country with a lot of men, and just as they were coming away he discovered a solitary painter at work on the cornice of the hotel, six stories from the ground. The bluffer looked up and then stepping out into the middle of the street he shook both fists at the painter and howled: "You moon-faced idiot, didn't I tell you to put more yellow in that paint? I'll come up there and kick your head off your shoulders, you spike nosed chump. I want you to understand hereafter that when I give you orders you're to carry them out, and don't you forget it, you—" At this moment the painter was seen to jam his brush in the paint pail, shove the pail through a window and start down the ladders at a miraculous rate of speed. The bluffer made a dead set for the railway station, but the painter chased him all over the town before he got there, and it took all his friends and two brakemen to keep the irate mechanic away from him up to the very last moment.—Blakely Hall in Brooklyn Eagle.

Faults of German Universities.
According to Dr. Flach, the universities are not, in the first place, examples of the doctrine that learning prevents manners becoming ferocious. Mature doctors have been so long in the habit of calling one another—in Latin—assinine idiots, that their pupils think abuse the proper style of a scholar. The general bullying tone is accompanied by its natural concomitants, cliques and partiality, even in examinations. A professor will do his best to pluck the pupils of a rival, and specialism is carried so far that the road to success is to study an examiner's hobby, beyond which he never travels—or, oddly enough, to make love to his daughter, and, if possible, to marry her. Indeed, according to Dr. Flach, the universities are simply hot-beds of petticoat government, intrigue, and worse; while the students' clubs are secret institutions, under which the life of an inoffensive student often becomes a torture to him, on account of some imaginary offense, or even caprice, of the president, of which the victim is never even informed. Persecuted by his comrades, plucked by rival professors, and worried by the fascination of some rival professor's, the life of that legendary hero, the German student, would not seem to be all pipes and beer.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Continually Haunted by Three Questions.
Dr. Heard used to say that American men were incessantly haunted by three questions: "How can I make money?" "Who will be the next president?" and "Where shall I go when I die?"—Exchange.
